

I believe a business who has previously done business with a consumer, should be able to contact that consumer about that product or other products that company has to offer. The only exception would be if the consumer again puts the company on the list because it has abused the privledge.